

I fully support the petition from FISTS. Ham radio is a technical hobby and demonstration of skill is required. Learning the code and increasing technical skills have always been a part of our hobby and should remain that way. There are many other radio services that do not require technical, or operating abilities. Individuals who wish to operate without any technical exams can operate on CB, FRS and GMRS.